From the Editor

Dear National Forensic League,

This issue of Rostrum is filled with several important updates. In September, we debuted our new website, www.nationalforensicleague.org. Within these pages, we are pleased to give you an in-depth tour of the site's new features—along with the rich variety of additional programs and services now available to our members, alumni, parents, and supporters.

This month, we also celebrate the many accomplishments of our students and coaches from the past school year, including our inaugural list of State All Americans, recognizing the top 1% of point earners in each state. Congratulations on outstanding season! By continuing to enter points and track your progress through our online Honor Society Records, you are sparking legacy. In the coming months, we are committed to finding even more ways to recognize our members and advocate the power of speech and debate.

We look forward to hearing your feedback about our new website and other initiatives so that we may better serve you. To share your thoughts and ideas, please email info@nationalforensicleague.org.

Sincerely,

Policy Debate: Synopsis of the Problem Areas for 2013-14

PROBLEM AREA I: EXPORT CONTROLS

Resolved: The United States federal government should substantially strengthen its export controls on military and/or dual-use technology toward one or more of the following: China, India, Israel, Russia. Taiwan.

▶ In an era where both domestic and international technology transfers are becoming necessary for a variety of reasons, many continue to inquire if current export controls are adequate to protect U.S. technology from misuse. The U.S. faces many challenges in export control policy including threats from nations that illegally acquire technology. A fair division of ground exists in the literature base between those who want to prioritize security concerns and protect technology and those who want to reduce export controls to stimulate growth in the technology sector. Furthermore, the topic offers debaters the opportunity to investigate a unique foreign policy tool which has been debated only in small areas of past topics. Affirmatives would have opportunities to investigate the role U.S. technology plays in international terrorism, proliferation, security, and human rights issues. For example they could strengthen controls on computers and microprocessors to China or Taiwan to prevent missile proliferation. Another affirmative case area could reverse the U.S.-India Civil Nuclear Agreement to prevent the transfer of U.S. nuclear technology to India. Affirmatives could also stop all current or future arms sales to Israel. Negatives would have the ability to highlight the impacts of export controls on trade, international relations, immigration, and domestic technological competitiveness. For example, negative teams would have ample ground to read relations disadvantages to each of the countries listed in the topic, or negatives could read a business confidence disadvantage. Negatives would have access to counterplans on alternate export control mechanisms like sanctions or quidpro-quo mechanisms. Solvency debates will also be diverse on both the type of technologies and the types of controls.

PROBLEM AREA II:

Resolved: The United States federal government should substantially increase its diplomatic engagement toward India in one or more of the following: nuclear non-proliferation, trade, terrorism.

► The region of South Asia has become one of primary focus for American lawmakers. Anchoring the region is India, a nation with a complex history of relations with the United States. There is no doubt of the strategic importance of India in the global order. India ranks second highest in global population with just over 1.1 billion people and is expected to overtake China for having the world's largest population by the year 2050. Combined with having one of the largest economies in the world and a place among the nuclear powers, India has staked its claim as a rising global power. In November 2010, President Obama stated, "India is not simply emerging. India has emerged." Despite its importance on the global stage, India has eluded the national high school debate community as a primary topic of discussion. This resolution focuses high school debaters on three important areas that emphasize foreign policy interactions between the United States and India: nuclear non-proliferation, terrorism, and trade. The India topic provides a rich and extensive literature base. Affirmatives will have an ample set of plan mechanisms to choose from including persuading India to join international nonproliferation regimes, negotiating a bilateral investment treaty, and further negotiations on the development of joint U.S.-India counterterrorism efforts in the region. Negative teams will also find their ground to be extensive. Aside from traditional disadvantage ground, such as politics and spending disadvantages, a negative will find plenty of ground in China's reaction to the affirmative plan. Furthering United States engagement with India will certainly implicate U.S.-Sino relations. Negatives can also engage in counterplan debates that are more coercive approaches to pressure India than through diplomatic engagement. Solvency debates will be extensive and diverse as negative teams will be able to generate in-depth arguments on the type of engagement the affirmative advocates.

PROBLEM AREA III: LATIN AMERICA

Resolved: The United States federal government should substantially increase its economic engagement toward Cuba, Mexico, or Venezuela.

► Emerging from a 19th century dominated by European colonialism and a late 20th-century existence as a proxy battlefield for the Cold War, Latin America is arriving on the world scene in ways that are likely to reshape the international political landscape. This resolution focuses on the nations of Cuba, Mexico, and Venezuela, each having its own unique dynamic which provides fertile ground for a year of debating. Cuba features a long-standing leftist government that will undergo a transition in the not too distant future, while Venezuela's Hugo Chavez is fighting to hold onto power in his country. Mexico has a long-standing relationship with the United States but has seen a power shift back to the Institutional Revolutionary Party, which had run the country as effectively a single-party state for seven decades. Because of the prevalence of Mexico in the news and Cuba in the study of American history, novice debaters should be able to make their entry into the topic relatively easily, while issues related to indigenous peoples and deeper discussions of capitalism will provide fertile educational ground for advanced and kritik-oriented debaters. Affirmative cases may examine the role of embargoes and sanctions, remittances from immigrants, foreign assistance, and issues regarding the drug economies. Negative arguments may address the efficacy of foreign assistance, non-economically oriented solutions to issues raised by the affirmative, kritiks of capitalism, the state and the United States specifically, and the effects of these policies on United States hegemony.

online no later than October 19, 2012

PROBLEM AREA IV: RUSSIA

Resolved: The United States federal government should substantially increase its engagement toward the Russian Federation in one or more of the following: nuclear arms reduction, missile defense cooperation, trade barrier reduction.

► The United States' relationship with Russia is of strategic importance, both in terms of national security and economic stability. Despite this significance, Stephen Cohen, professor of Russian studies at NYU, writes: "And yet, in the United States, there is virtually no critical discussion, certainly no debate, about American policy toward Russia." Russia has remained on the periphery of debates in recent years, but a more in-depth evaluation focused on the three core issues facing the two superpowers would be timely and educational: nuclear arms reduction, missile defense cooperation, and trade barrier reduction. In a post-Cold War world, military concerns are still of vital importance but encompass more than the security of the world's two largest nuclear arsenals. Additionally, increasing economic interdependence coupled with Russia's accession to the World Trade Organization make trade relations between the two nations equally important. History proves that engagement is achievable but is not without its challenges. Affirmative positions may include: reduction(s) in tactical nuclear weapons, greater reduction(s) in strategic nuclear arms, reduction(s) in ICBMs, confidence-building measures to de-militarize the expansion of NATO along Russia's borders, commitment not to build or direct military installations near Russian borders or strategic forces, trade agreement focused on energy and non-energy sectors, bilateral investment treaty. Negative positions may focus on: weakened deterrence and military readiness, perception of appeasement, effect on Putin's and Obama's credibility, NATO cohesion, democracy promotion, pressure on human rights abuses, critical analyses of international relations.

PROBLEM AREA V: SOUTHEAST ASIA

Resolved: The United States federal government should substantially increase its military presence and/or economic engagement in Southeast Asia.

▶ President Obama's "Asian Pivot" put the U.S. back in Southeast Asia, a region that China views as its sphere of influence. Professor Donald Weatherbee, an expert on the region, identifies this area as a zero-sum game for influence between those two powers. Southeast Asia is "the third engine" for Asian growth, already surpassing Europe as the U.S.'s trading partner, and has multiple nations with projected economic growth greater than that of India or China. However, the region is rife with sweatshops, sex trafficking, piracy, terrorism, pollution, energy shortages, and political corruption. The Congressional Research Service identifies U.S. interests in the region as promoting stability, ensuring freedom of sea lanes, enhancing trade and investment, supporting treaty allies, and promoting democracy/human rights in the region. Recent events such as standoffs in the Spratley Islands and the South China Sea have left U.S. allies wondering if the U.S. has abandoned them to be absorbed into China's growing hegemonic sphere. Affirmative military positions could increase the presence of troops, bases, or technology in the region to combat piracy, project power, or train local forces for challenges such as terrorism. Affirmative plans promoting economic engagement could advocate increasing development aid or expanding opportunities for trade and economic growth. China is a key position for negative teams because it views U.S. involvement as an expansion of the containment doctrine; even increased economic engagement would jeopardize the region's trade with China. In the past, U.S. engagement has emboldened local nations in their dealings with China, creating incidents that have heightened the chance for war. Development disadvantages, international relations arguments, the interaction between economic growth and environmental decay, local corruption/misuse of aid and actor arguments, all serve to make the topic extremely balanced for debate. 🕺

RESOLVED: ADAPTATION SHOULD BE THE MOST URGENT RESPONSE TO CLIMATE CHANGE.

The Bickel & Brewer Foundation and New York University proudly announce the 12th Annual International Public Policy Forum (IPPF) – the only contest that gives high school students across the globe the opportunity to engage in written and oral debates on issues of public policy!

This international contest is open to all schools – public and private – for free. It welcomes students from around the world and across the spectrum of debate and forensic events. High school teams compete for more than $50,000 in awards and scholarships. In addition, the top eight schools win all-expense-paid trips to the IPPF Finals in New York City!

HERE'S HOW TO PARTICIPATE:

- 1. Work with your debate coach, English or Social Studies teacher to form a team, then go to www.bickelbrewer.com/ippf and register by October 17, 2012. Teams are typically comprised of three to eight students. If your school has a large debate team or multiple student groups that are interested, you may want to register more than one team.
- After you register, prepare a qualifying round essay on the 2012-2013 IPPF topic:

"Resolved: Adaptation should be the most urgent response to climate change."

The IPPF topic offers students the opportunity to debate what is perhaps the most important issue of the new century. In the coming years, global policy concerning climate change will affect everyone, everywhere.

The IPPF topic tasks participants to debate the priority of action — whether adaptation should be a higher priority than other possible responses, including attempts to prevent climate change. The IPPF Topic Selection Committee decided that the core of the climate change debate concerns the prioritization of the global response.

Teams should focus their research and writing on which course of action should be the "most urgent" response to climate change. Affirmative support for the resolution requires a defense of adaptation as the more urgent response, while negating the resolution will require challenging adaptation as the most urgent course of action.

- 3. Essays are limited to 2,800 words and may be written from an affirmative or negative perspective. Visit www.bickelbrewer.com/ippf to view sample essays and learn how to format your essay. Essays must be submitted by noon CST on October 30, 2012, to ippf@bickelbrewer.com.
- 4. Qualifying round essays will be evaluated by judges, and the top 32 teams will be announced November 14, 2012. These 32 teams all earn cash prizes and advance to the elimination rounds, where they continue their participation in a written debate tournament.

Individual matches begin immediately, with one school affirming the resolution and the other negating it. The essays are again reviewed by judges, and winning teams advance to the next round. This process continues until the final eight teams emerge!

5. PACK YOUR BAGS! The final eight teams earn all-expense-paid trips to the April 12-14, 2013, IPPF Finals in New York City. In New York, students will have the opportunity to participate in an oral debate competition before some of the world's foremost experts in debate, business, law, and politics. Previous judges have included NYU President John Sexton, NASA Astronaut Mike Massimino, Ret. General Wesley Clark, and Bickel & Brewer Partner William A. Brewer III.

The winning team takes home a $10,000 grand prize and the "Bickel & Brewer Cup."

Strong Federal Investment in Transportation: Why We Can't Wait

by Joung Lee

hen was the last time you thought about how the road on which you're traveling was built? Or have you ever thought about how much it would cost to build a mile of a subway line? You probably haven't had to think about these things because you and your family have generally been able to get to wherever you want, whenever you want. To a large extent, this kind of experience has been enabled by consistently robust investments in transportation infrastructure throughout our history. Perhaps, providing a transportation system, on which all people and goods rely, is akin to being a referee at a sports match—as long as the ref doesn't make an erroneous call, he or she will go unnoticed. In other words, like when all the right calls are made in a game, there is little acknowledgement or appreciation just like when highway bridges withstand cold and hot weather for decades, when years go without a single plane crash, or when trains and trucks deliver millions of online merchandise order on time.

Increasingly, however, this critical element of the daily American life—the historically unparalleled access to mobility—is under threat from our collective inability to make the necessary investments in transportation infrastructure to just maintain existing highway, transit, and freight systems, let alone improve their conditions and performance. For example, a recent Congressionally-chartered commission (report available on NFL.transportation.org) noted that in order to meet increasing demands and to underpin strong economic growth, the United States must invest at least $225 billion every year for the next 50 years. But right now, we're investing $90 billion, or about 40 percent of the amount of resources necessary. When it comes to infrastructure investments, the consequence of inaction can seem unnoticeable at first. But like the proverbial frog in a gradually heating pot that slowly meets its end, continued accretion of all the problems attendant with lack of transportation investment more potholes, more congestion, more unsafe bridges, more broken buses and trains—is a sure recipe for declines in economic strength and quality of life in

In recent years, the federal investment in highway and transit has declined, amounting to less than 1.5 percent of the gross domestic product. (While China's economy is less mature and therefore provides an imperfect measuring stick, its infrastructure spending in 2006 was a staggering nine percent of its GDP.) In fact, the U.S. now ranks 24th on key global indicators for infrastructure quality among 142 countries around the world, according to the World Economic Forum's Global Competitiveness Report for FY 2011-12. This is a significant fall from the number eight spot six years prior.

So what can be done to address this infrastructure shortfall? This is where the federal government's leadership comes in. As exemplified by the construction of the Interstate Highway System in the 20th century, there is no other actor in either the public or private sector that can marshal the significant amount of resources necessary throughout the entire country to facilitate interstate commerce and movement of people like Uncle Sam. For example, from 1950 to 1989, U.S. industries realized production cost savings averaging 18 cents annually for each dollar invested in the road system according to the Federal Highway Administration. Such gains in efficiency provided every year by highway transportation coincided with significant gains seen throughout the American economy during those years.

In terms of paying for federal investments in transportation, we have historically relied on the gas tax, which currently amounts to 18.4 cents per gallon. Unlike a sales tax which fluctuates with the price of a good, the gas tax has remained flat since 1993. As a result, it has lost 37 percent of its purchasing power by 2012 due to inflation, while the cost of building and maintaining transportation infrastructure has risen. One obvious solution is to raise this gas tax by 11 cents to bring its purchasing power back to what it used to be 19 years ago. This action can raise about $15 billion in additional revenues every year to help shore up our chronic underinvestment in infrastructure, while costing only about $5 in additional expense per vehicle each month. However, gas tax increase tends to face immense political opposition at both the federal and state levels, and it cannot be seen as a long-term funding source given that vehicles are relying less and less on gasoline consumption, while placing the same amount of wear-andtear on our roadways.

Another option that is starting to receive more attention is a fee based on distance traveled, or a Vehicle Miles Traveled (VMT) fee. In addition to providing sustainable funding in the long run, a VMT fee can address a number of desirable transportation policy goals, such as reducing traffic congestion or harmful pollutant emissions, by varying the per-mile charge based on relevant vehicle characteristics (e.g., size, weight, emissions class) or the time and location of travel. This would create financial incentives to, for example, purchase less polluting cars or avoid peak hour travel when possible. The biggest challenge facing the VMT fee is the lack of political support for a major transition that would be necessary to collect this fee from every vehicle (compared to the gas tax which is already embedded into the fuel price at the pump), and to address the public perception that individual privacy would be comprised under this approach.

While there are benefits and drawbacks to each method of generating transportation revenue, there is no shortage of technically feasible options, as seen in the table on the next page.

^{*}VMT fee estimates refer to miles traveled on Interstate System.

In addition to long-term economic productivity and quality-of-life benefits that a robust federal transportation investment would engender nationwide, the current economic malaise provides a unique opportunity to get even more bang for the buck in two ways. First, the construction industry was one of the hardest hit sectors in the great recession, with the unemployment rate sitting at 16.4 percent in 2011, almost double the national average of 8.9 percent. As such, a major transportation investment initiative would significantly aid in recovery of a critical industry. Second, the cost of borrowing by government currently remains at historically low rates. Rather than paying more later for the same amount of labor and equipment needed to construct and repair roads, rails, and runways, taking advantage of the low interest rate now would enable governments to provide benefits of infrastructure investment at a substantially lower cost to the taxpayer in the long-term.

Throughout history, America has always possessed both the necessary vision and willpower to make transformative changes for the betterment of its citizens. While the development of the Interstate System has been one of our crowning achievements, the future success of the nation is dependent not only on keeping this and other valuable transportation assets in peak condition, but also adding significant new system capacity enabled by the federal government. If we can realize this goal, it would once again assure world-class mobility for all Americans for decades to come.

Joung Lee serves as Associate Director for Finance and Business Development at the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials (AASHTO), where he focuses on surface transportation finance, policy, and legislative matters.

Introducing Our New Website

earning how to find your way around a new website always takes time. This is especially true when it's a new version of a site you've been using for a while, and that site is starting to offer information and resources that have never been available before. That's what we've done with the new www.nationalforensicleague.org: for the first time, we're making available to our members Team and Individual Resource Packages that include a wealth of materials, from debate evidence to Extemp topic analysis, to a searchable script database and final round videos from our most recent National Tournament.

But let's start with a tour of the site itself. On the home page, the first thing you'll notice is the navigation bar at the top. That's the best way to explore the site. The menu includes four primary options: High School, Middle School, Alumni, and About Us.

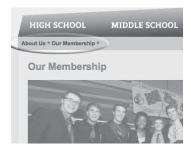

The High School and Middle School menus both include the same four options: Get Involved, Recognition, Resources, and Community. Get Involved is where you can go to join the League, find a tournament calendar, and get information about the District and National Tournaments. Recognition is the place to find information about all the different ways in which we recognize member schools, students, and coaches. Resources holds all the different forms, manuals, written resources, and videos the League has to offer. This includes everything you get with your Team or Individual Resource Package, but we'll get into more detail on that later. Finally, Community is where you can find League publications, as well as contact information for both your district leadership and other speech & debate organizations.

The other main menu that you're likely to use frequently is About Us. That's the place to find information about the League's history, the Board of Directors and our staff, how to advocate for speech and debate, and how to contact the League itself.

Once you click on a primary landing page, you can use the links on the left side of the page to explore further. Those links change as you get deeper into the site, but you can always click on the topmost blue link to return to a higher level in the site's navigation. There's also a dark blue "crumb trail" (figure 1) under the main menu that both shows you where you are on the site and can be used to find your way back to where you started.

That should give you a sense of how the site is put together. But let's return to the home page, since there are still plenty of features worth mentioning there.

On the left side of the homepage, you'll see the USER LOGIN box. That's how you log in to the site and get access to the League's resources and your Dashboard.

In the middle of the home page, you'll find a series of yellow links, which provide a quick way to access a number of pages that League members, supporters, and those interested in learning more about us are likely to use.

Just below the yellow bar are news items, featured videos, the latest issue of Rostrum, and information about both the National and District Tournaments. You'll also see the list of top schools that you're used to seeing on our website. But there's now a whole lot more there. Click on Top Competitors, and you'll see a list of those students with the most points in each of the National Tournament's main events. Just click on the event for which you'd like that information and give the data a chance to load. There's also an option to see the students with the most points overall, the contenders for League All American status! Stay tuned as even more information, including rankings of the top students in each state, becomes available here.

Once you start exploring the site, there are also a number of navigation aids that can help keep you from getting lost. At the bottom of every page is a basic site map that can link you to all the primary landing pages under each of the main menu items. There's also a list of Quick Links that easily takes you to frequently used parts of the site, such as where you go to enter points, the current debate topics, a list of district contacts, and the League's forms and manuals. There's even a link to a complete site map, where you can find a link to every single page on the entire site! You'll also see many of those same links on the right side of many pages, including links to access that complete site map, login, enter points, and the current topics.

"In short, the new www.nationalforensicleague.org has something for everyone."

Why Speech & Debate Press & Media Enter Points Donate Join the League

Now let's talk about what happens once you actually log in to the site. If you are a coach at a League member school, just use the username and password you use to enter points. Any active coach at a member school gets access to member resources, and any active coach at a school with a Team Resource Package can access those resources, even if they don't have permission to enter or edit points. Chapter advisors can make sure all their assistants have access to the full range of resources, even if particular assistants shouldn't be entering points themselves.

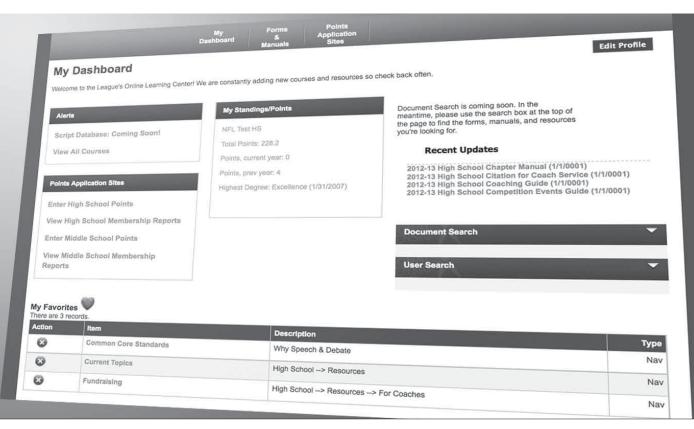

If you are a student at a League member school, you need to create a username and password by clicking on the Register link in the USER LOGIN box on the home page. But before you do that, you'll need to get your Student PIN from your coach, who can access that information through the Website PIN Codes link in the points site. That PIN will allow you to create an account, which gives you access to the resources available to League members. You can also purchase an Individual Resource Package when you sign up for an account. An annual subscription is just $18 for a student at a member school, and $9 for a student at a school that has purchased a Team Resource Package!

Everyone else, including parents and judges, can sign up for a free account and either get access to a limited range of resources or purchase access to the full range of materials available to League students and coaches.

The first thing you'll see after logging in is your Dashboard. This is where you'll get information just for you. There is information about your current standing in the League, including your current points and degrees. There are also alerts regarding resources and features that have been added to the site. And this is where you'll be able to find any pages you mark as "favorite" by clicking the heart image in the same blue bar in which you find the crumb trail. Finally, your Dashboard is the place to go to edit your profile, which is where you can purchase an Individual Resource Package if you don't have one already.

Now that you're logged in, you can also access the resources available to you as either a League member or a Resource Package subscriber.

Fortunately, those resources are also easy to find. Just click on "High School" at the top of the home page. Then, on the left side of the page, click "Resources." From there, you just have to select the role that best describes you and then the kind of event for which you'd like to find resources, either speech or debate. That's where you'll see a variety of print and video materials for those events, and where you'll also have the option to further specify what you're looking for, whether it's only Public Speaking or Interp event resources, or only those materials for Public Forum, Lincoln-Douglas, Policy, or Congressional Debate.

And there are already plenty of resources available now. For Public Forum and Lincoln-Douglas, a new topic analysis is available the day after each topic is announced. For Policy, a novice starter file is online, and evidence updates are posted twice each month. For Extemp, new topic analysis videos and practice questions are posted every week. For Interp, we have a fully searchable script database that will help you find that perfect piece. We'll also be hosting a series of webinars each and every month, and posting demonstration rounds on each new debate topic.

That makes both the Individual and Team Resource Packages an outstanding value. For just $18 a year, a member coach or student gets nine different PF topic analyses, five different LD topic analyses, at least 16 Policy Debate evidence updates, more than 40 different Extemp topic analyses, and much more. Include the videos of the final rounds from the most recent National Tournament, which cost $199 on DVD, and it's easy to see why that $18 investment is more than worth it.

Plus, for just $150, a school can purchase a Team Resource Package. That gives all their coaches access to those same great resources, and allows students to purchase an Individual Resource Package for just $9! That means your team saves money as long as you have at least one coach and 15 students. With each additional coach, it's even easier to see why spending that $150 makes sense. Moreover, since the Team Resource Package includes a 50% discount on final round DVDs, it's also a great option for teams that still want to be able to watch those rounds offline.

In short, our new website has something for everyone. Given the low price and the variety of resources available, don't miss out on this inexpensive way to get the most out of your season!

Why is there an additional fee for these resources?

Imagine how much it costs the League to produce—and host online—so many videos, eLearning clinics, debates, and resources, plus provide our summer institute experience. Thanks to generous donors and volunteers, we're able to cover many costs, but we also ask schools and students who take advantage of these resources to pay a share. That helps keep basic membership accessible to all.

Top Ten New Features!

Resources. We are working around the clock to provide you with countless, event-specific resources this year—many of which are included with the $99 school membership fee! For more information about the value of League membership, see pages 25-26.

Dashboard. Anyone who visits our site—students, coaches, parents, alumni, media professionals, and more—has the ability to sign in with a free account and access our custom dashboard. The ability to favorite frequently accessed materials and receive important updates from the League are just some of the benefits of registering on the new site.

Webinars. Our new site allows us to host eLearning clinics with state of the art technology and provide an extremely inexpensive summer institute experience for students and coaches. Check back often to learn more about dates and topics, available through our new Virtual Classroom.

Script Database. For those who purchase our Team Resource Package, we are excited to offer a fully searchable, multi-year script database including all Interp pieces performed at the National Tournament in previous years. Search by year, category, gender, and placement—completely accessible from your dashboard—coming soon!

Recognition. Our home page leaderboard and rankings are a great way to keep up to date on League standings. Of course, you can also track your own progress via the dashboard, or through your school profile page and membership reports within the points site.

Press and Media. Our team is growing our press and media section in order to spark excitement and garner attention about the power of speech and debate across the country—and beyond.

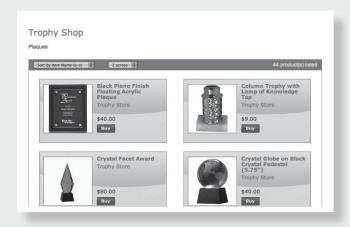

Connect. Follow the National Forensic League on your favorite social media platforms! Like us on Facebook, follow us on Twitter, or join our LinkedIn group. Also, join our Alumni Network and stay in touch via our newsletters and biannual digital alumni magazine.

Keyword Search. Receiving a round of applause at the Summer Leadership Conference, this seemingly innocent addition of a functional search bar is certain to make anyone's visit to our website more enjoyable.

Complete Site Map. While the fresh new look and improved site architecture are designed to be more intuitive than ever before, if you get stuck, we offer both a basic and a complete site map, available at the bottom of every page, to help you find exactly what you need Online Store. Even our trophy shop has received a much-deserved facelift! Watch for additional merchandise, DVDs, and low-cost resources available for purchase in the coming weeks and months ahead.

Pi Kappa Delta at 100

ou've probably heard something about Pi Kappa Delta (PKD). As an official collegiate partner organization of the National Forensic League, PKD has been reaching out to graduating seniors at the National Tournament.

"We've always had a close working relationship with Pi Kappa Delta," said Executive Director Scott Wunn, "so they were a natural."

Beginning this year, League students who joins Pi Kappa Delta may transfer ten percent of their cumulative merit points into the PKD Credit Point System. They can then continue to earn points for competition, service, and scholarship activities throughout their college careers. Even if they decide not to compete in college, PKD membership provides alumni with a subtle means of inserting their high school speech and debate experience into their college resumés.

"I think joining is even more important for students who are not planning on competing in college," stated Gina Jensen, PKD's current president. Students can continue to earn points for judging at high school tournaments, or for scholarly and community service projects. When they graduate, they can use their PKD degree status as a conversation starter with prospective employers or graduate school admissions officers.

"Realistically," Jensen noted, "your PKD degree status is verification of your speech and debate ability by a nationallyrecognized intercollegiate honorary. This should be pretty compelling to an employer, and it relieves you of the awkwardness of having to talk about what you did four years ago when you were in high school."

So what exactly is Pi Kappa Delta? Like the National Forensic League, PKD is a comprehensive forensic organization meaning it supports service, scholarship, and competition in many different individual events and forms of debate. Thanks to a grant from the Arthur N. Rupe Foundation, PKD launched intercollegiate competition in Public Forum Debate last year. The same grant funded Caress Russell's full-time position as PKD's Public Forum Debate National Coordinator.

"I'm just thrilled with the possibilities this position provides," Caress stated. "For the first time, we will have funding assistance for student-run teams who would like to attend the 100th anniversary tournament and participate in Public Forum Debate. There also will be more than $30,000 in scholarship funding available."

A major component of Russell's job will be working with students to establish debate programs on college campuses without them. "I'm here to provide advice to students all over the country who are 'trapped' on campuses that do not recognize the value of speech and debate training," Russell observed.

Pi Kappa Delta membership is available to literally any undergraduate student. If there are fewer than five students on campus interested in forming a chapter, students can join Pi Kappa Delta's "National General Chapter," and have all of the rights and privileges of membership.

So what exactly are the benefits of joining? In addition to providing access to PKD's Credit Point recognition system, members are eligible to compete at the national tournament—regardless of whether their school has an official forensic program. Members may participate in leadership development and governance—serving, for example, as Student Representatives on PKD's National Council. They may submit scholarly works for publication in PKD's national journal, The Forensic, for recognition at a PKD Undergraduate Research Conference, or "To Honor Scholarship" event.

In addition to recognition with a PKD Degree, members are eligible for nomination as Academic All Americans, or for selection to participate in exclusive members-only international service learning opportunities. "I think our India program will be a transformative experience for undergraduates," noted past-president Phillip Voight. "I've taught with students in India before, and for Pi Kappa Delta members to be able to travel to Bangalore and help establish the Bangalore Debate Society is just a wonderful opportunity." Additional service learning opportunities are being developed in China, South Africa, and locations within the United States.

Pi Kappa Delta also hosts large and competitive national tournaments. PKD's national tournament and convention in Portland, Oregon, featured more than 600 debate entries and more than 1,500 individual events entries from 91 schools representing 28 states. The 100th Anniversary Tournament this coming March 2013 promises to be even larger.

"Although the tournament has always been competitive," President Jensen said, "we've managed to keep the focus on educational achievement."

Pi Kappa Delta's slogan is, "The Art of Persuasion, Beautiful and Just," a phrase that recognizes the essentially ethical nature of human communication. Now more than ever, perhaps, there is a need for training in effective and ethical communicative practices. Employers list communication skills as the most important ingredient of occupational success. Demand Media (a leading new media firm) said it best: "Good business communication helps get the job done well, on time and on budget. The boss or team member who can communicate objectives, reasoning, and step-wise tasks in a concise and coherent manner contributes more to a company's success than one who does not. These communicators are highly valued in today's complex and competitive business world, and are often earmarked for promotion and increased responsibility."

Pi Kappa Delta provides students with the types of critical thinking, problem-solving, and oral communication skills that are central to success. Not surprisingly, membership also provides a variety of networking opportunities and invitations to Alumni socials and national convention Alumni Caucus events. PKD's alumni are a veritable "Who's Who" of American success. As Susan Millsap, PKD's

Historian, put it, "Our alumni have been successful in all walks of life—everyone from politicians like George McGovern and Ann Richards, to Spencer Tracy, the famous actor, Edward R. Murrow, the award winning journalist, Evangelist Robert Schuller, or Pulitzer Prize winning author James McPherson."

One of the secrets to PKD's success is a willingness to embrace change. "Many of the things that are now commonplace in forensics were actually invented by Pi Kappa Delta," stated Michael Bartanen, PKD's National secretary-treasurer. "We hosted the first national tournament, and Bruno Jacob—a PKD alum—went on to found the National Forensic League."

As it nears its 100th anniversary, PKD remains as dynamic and energetic as ever. It hosts a blog and Facebook page, and in addition, it is conducting a nationwide census where respondents can tell funders and administrators about the value of forensic participation.

PKD is also publishing a National Speech and Debate Directory in 2013 that will contain contact information for everyone in the country with speech and debate experience at any level. Each of these projects is based on a brief survey that takes just a few minutes to complete. (Go directly to either survey by simply scanning the QR codes at right with your mobile device.)

Lifetime membership in PKD is just $35 and can be processed online at www.pikappadelta.com. "At less than $10 a year," said Carthage College mediastudies professor Jonathan Bruning, "my Pi Kappa Delta membership was perhaps the best value of my entire life."

Visit www.pikappadelta.com for more information and resources, or contact caress.russell@pikappadelta.com to reach Caress Russell, Public Forum Debate National Coordinator. 🕺

Frequently Asked Questions

- I'm going to a school without an active speech or debate program; can I still join Pi Kappa Delta? Absolutely, and if you can find four other interested students, we can even help you start your own chapter. PKD can also provide advice on fundraising, recruiting and publicizing the benefits of speech and debate experience.
- My preferred college has a program, but it is not a Pi Kappa Delta school. Can I still earn PKD points? Yes. Although it would be wonderful if every school had a Pi kappa Delta chapter. Nonetheless, even if your teammates are not members, and if your coach refuses to form a chapter, you can still become a member and receive PKD Credit Points for all of your speech and debate activities.
- · I'm not sure if I will have time to participate in forensics in college. Shouldn't I wait to join until I am sure I'm going to compete? Pi Kappa Delta members need not compete to earn points for scholarly or service-related activities. Why not join immediately, and earn points for things other than speech and debate competition.
- I'm a high school coach. Why should I care if my students become Pi Kappa Delta members? One of the benefits of the PKD Credit Point System is that it rewards students for service to the local community. As such. PKD students will be eager to judge at tournaments that you host, serve as assistant coaches, and even lobby your local school board for increased funding.

Interpretation

Gaining an Understanding of Online Interp Source Rules

his past year, the League's Interpretation Committee was charged with the task of determining whether or not the current "printed and published" standard for material should be expanded to include literature available from online websites.

After extensive consideration, the committee recommended that the League expand the current "printed and published" standard for material performed in main and supplemental oral interpretation events (Dramatic, Humorous, and Duo Interpretation—as well as Prose, Poetry, Storytelling) to include limited use of literature that originates from online sources.

Because digital publication is not a "trend," but a new norm for how people acquire and purchase books, scripts, and other literature, the new rules (now in effect for 2012-13) are designed to meet these considerations and will evolve over time.

Based on the committee's thoughtful recommendations, the Board of Directors adopted the Literary Digital Publications Rubric, which is outlined on the following pages. These standards were then used to develop the official list of approved websites, which were published online at www.nationalforensicleague.org.

Coaches and publishing companies alike had the opportunity to submit websites for consideration from February through April. After a thorough vetting process, the official list of approved websites was published online in June.

The list of approved websites will be evaluated, revised, and updated annually by the League. If a website has been approved, it does not need to be re-submitted yearly. However, in order for a website to remain on the list, it must continue to meet the standards established by the rubric.

Beginning with the 2012-13 academic year, submissions must be received between November 1 and March 1 for

About Toasted Cheese

Toasted Cheese publishes flash fiction, fiction, creative non-fiction, and poetry. Our focus is on quality of work, therefore the number of pieces published in each issue will vary. We accept approximately 5% of the submissions we receive.

Help improve TC's listing at Duotrope's Digest. Please report rejections as well as acceptances. Thanks!

TC does not restrict publication based on subject matter, however, due to the nature of our audience and our service provider's Terms of Service, we do not publish work that includes excessively graphic sex or violence.

We encourage unpublished writers to submit to Toasted Cheese. We are impressed by quality writing, not by a list of credentials.

Literary Digital Publications Rubric

Standard A.

- The website offers online material published directly on its web page(s). These pages must be printable. Downloaded files are NOT accepted.
 - The League defines a web page as a document coded with hypertext markup language (HTML), displayed in a web browser.
 - The League defines a downloaded file as a specific non-HTML format, such as PDF or word processing document.
- Rationale: This initial parameter best insures original manuscript materials that are unalterable and allows text verification of the original material to be easier for officials.

For example, see Figure A (opposite).

▶ Standard B.

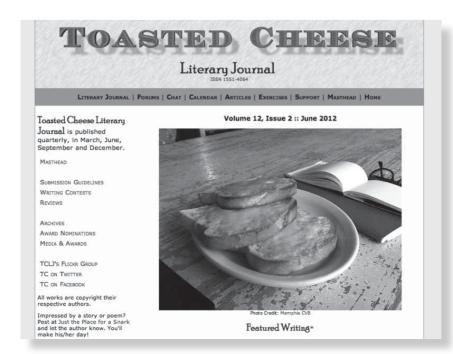

- The literary material is from a website with strict editorial submission standards that include editorial review and acceptance.
 - Personal sites (Facebook, live journals, blogs) will not be accepted.
 - Personal professional sites (those where a writer who has his/her own site and can place his/her words for sale or view) are not acceptable.
 - Publish it sites (those with one click upload or that accept submissions without a selection process) will not be accepted.
- Rationale: This upholds literary standards, is designed to deter the production of original material by students and coaches, encourages the use of stable websites, and strives to provide accessibility to all interested parties.

▶ Standard C.

- Texts must come from a verifiable website that can be accessed universally by any user. The site and literary text needs to be verifiable on the web if challenged.
 - Unmarked / casual sites where individuals can easily post work either for performance or criticism will not be accepted.
 - The website has been in existence for a minimum of two years prior to submission for the upcoming school year (several online tools allow for verification of the existence of a website).
- Rationale: This further insures fair access to material and evaluation of website standards.

consideration the following academic school year. Website submissions made after the deadline cannot be added to the list for use in competition until the following year.

Next Steps

At the Summer Leadership Conference in Las Vegas, district leaders sparked in-depth conversations about the new online Interp source rules and their future direction. The Board of Directors has authorized the formation of a committee to examine the issues brought to the group's attention, particularly concerning how to reconcile "printed and published" materials with digital publications.

While it was not the current committee's task to rewrite the current printed and published rules, procedures, or practices, a new committee will discuss ways to phase in additional considerations over the coming years in a manner that allows the expansion of the rule to be manageable for the membership while moving into a digital age of publication.

The Board welcomes a wide variety of voices and opinions on this important topic area. Anyone interested in serving on or contributing to this ad hoc leadership committee should email info@nationalforensicleague.org.

existence for more than two years; anyone can access the

Q: Are Kindle or Nook acceptable under the Digital Publications Rubric?

A: No. The Digital Publications Rubric only deals with web pages; therefore, electronic books that do not provide printed versions of the electronic page are currently not included in the parameters for digital publications. Current League rules do not accept Kindle or Nook literature, and thus, this rule does not change the status quo.

Rationale: The current rule for verification of lines selected for a performance script demands highlighting the lines on photocopied pages of the original material. Because these sources do not provide printed pages, they could not be included in this first phase of the rubric for digital publication.

Main Questions to Ask When Selecting a Piece for Competiton

- Is the selection from the League's approved website list?
- Is the literature printed from a web page?
 - If it is printed from a web page, then yes, the literature is allowed.
 - If it is a downloaded file, the literature is not allowed.

"The committee's recommendations were designed to focus on high standards; to be conservative in approach; to be comparable to current demands for verification of printed and published material; and to promote the expansion of source opportunity—without 'opening the flood gates.'"

- Q: Can I use a downloadable manuscript file from a website?
- A: No, not under the current Digital Publications Rubric.

Rationale: We are beginning the entrance to digital publications with the highest level of encrypted text, which best protects the authenticity of the script. That is the current standard for the rubric.

- O: If a website is on the approved list, does that mean anything on the website is acceptable to use for performance material?
- A: No. The website being placed on the list is a starting point. The literature on the website is eligible IF it meets the remaining standards cited in Digital Publications Rubric. The Digital Publications Rubric should be followed in its entirety.
- Q: If a website on the list offers some selections that are printed directly from website pages and others that are downloadable files, can I use either format?
- A: No. The Digital Publications Rubric should be followed in its entirety. The selections that are available by printing directly from the web page are acceptable. The selections that are available in a downloadable file are not acceptable.

- Q: If a website on the list offers both web pages for print and the option to order traditionally printed and published manuscripts, can I use either format?
- A: Yes, that is your choice. However, for web pages, always apply the standards in the Digital Publications Rubric. For traditionally published and printed materials, refer to the current printed publication rules for that format.
- Q: If I want to order a hard copy book from a website like Amazon.com, does that website need to be on the approved list?
- A: No. Since ordering is a method of purchase, not a format of publication, ordering a traditionally printed and published manuscript would already be acceptable under our current printed and published rules and not be relevant to the Digital Publications Rubric.
- Q: Are e-scripts allowed (like those from Samuel French)?
- A: No. You must use the printed, published version.

- Q: Do sites already accepted to the list have to be resubmitted each year?
- A: If a website has been approved, it does not need to be re-submitted yearly. The website will automatically be reevaluated by the League. In order for a website to remain on the list, it must continue to meet the standards established. Eligibility will be determined during the yearly evaluation process and the final list will be updated accordingly. Coaches are encouraged to bring relevant changes in websites to the attention of the national office.

Pam Cady Wycoff began her speech and debate career 33 years ago at Mankato Loyola High School, a small school with 200 students. She has been at Apple Valley High School for the last 23 years, where she continues to coach and serve as the Director of Forensics. Pam has qualified students to the National Tournament every year—with 50 speakers and debaters in her program advancing to the Final Round. Of those students, Pam has personally coached 39 national finalists, with 18 finishing as runner-up and nine being named national champion. In addition, nine students have been named All American and 35 Academic All American. Between 1990 and 1995, her teams won five National Team Sweepstakes Awards. The program was awarded the Bruno E. Jacob Award in 1998 and has been recognized as a Team of Excellence seven times. In addition to coaching, Pam enjoys "giving back" to the organization. Believing in the importance of coach education, she was a coordinator and presenter for the Bradley Foundation's Instructional Video Project and has offered coaching workshops around the country. Since the early years of Lincoln-Douglas Debate, she has been actively involved in the development and promotion of the activity and served on the LD Topic Selection Committee for eight years. For 23 years, Pam has been a District Committee member and was elected to the Board of Directors in 2005. As a Board member, she has served as a liaison for five coach-driven ad hoc committees regarding the events of Lincoln-Douglas Debate, Public Forum Debate, and Oral Interpretation. For her consistent service, she was awarded the Distinguished Service Key in 1989, the Service Plaque in 1995, and most recently received her Seventh Service Plaque of Distinction in 2012. Pam was inducted into the Minnesota State High School League Hall of Fame in 2004 and the National Forensic League Hall of Fame in 2007.

Gay Brasher

Leland High School, CA
April 12, 2012
24,404 points

This is Gay Brasher's 47th year as a speech and debate teacher and coach. She began teaching in 1966 at Carencro High School. Within two years, she was named Louisiana Speech Teacher of the Year. She moved to San Jose in 1970. Here, on her own initiative, she started forensic programs concurrently at all six San Jose Unified high schools and continued to simultaneously direct these programs for more than a decade. In 1998, she was named San Jose Unified's Teacher of the Year. Gay teaches and coaches at Leland High School, which has been the nation's largest League chapter for six years, since 2000. She retired from full time teaching in June of 2002 but volunteers more than 45 hours per week in addition to her part-time employment at Leland.

Gay is a member of both the League and California halls of fame. In 2000, she was named National Forensic League Coach of the Year. In addition, she was an honoree for the Tribute to Women Award honoring Silicon Valley's Executive Women.

Gay also works with middle school students from an area feeder school and at an urban school. At Burnett Middle School, under her leadership, the Burnett program has grown to three speech and debate classes, and the school's English Language Learners travel to other schools to make presentations in elementary, English-only classrooms. Gay also teaches speech to students at Burnett feeder elementary schools. In addition, Leland and Burnett students run a middle school speech and debate tournament in the fall and a larger two-day version in the spring. She hopes to continue teaching and coaching for years to come.

Michael E. Starks began coaching at Newcastle, WY in 1975 and moved to Cheyenne East in 1992. East now has a program which consistently competes at the highest level in the Rocky Mountain Region. He has had state champion squads at both schools and Cheyenne East has won the State Championship many times. The teams have had individual state champions in every event except Public Forum. Michael has been elected State President four times and served for eight years. He began the state's New Coaches' Workshop at their Fall Conference. He has been the state's representative on the National Debate Topic Selection Committee since 1990. Michael served as a member of the Wyoming District Committee until the Hole in the Wall District was formed, at which time he became the chair of the new district and served in that position until 2005. His teams have won the Leading Chapter Award four times, the District Tournament Trophy four times, and the District Tournament plaque 15 times. His students have been in finals in Poetry, Prose, and Extemp. He has worked in tab rooms at nationals for many years. His team won the Speech and Debate School of Excellence in 2002 as well as the Speech School of Excellence Award. He was admitted into the National Forensic League Hall of Fame in 2006. Michael lives in Cheyenne with his wife Paula, and they have two children and two grandchildren.

David McKenzie became a student member of the League in 1976. He started coaching in 1979. He has coached at Wabash, Oak Hill, Northfield, and Plymouth High Schools in Indiana. He is currently the Head Speech and Debate Coach at Plymouth High School. During his career, he has been honored to serve the League as a district chair, district committee member, national tab room worker, and as the host of the 2012 Indianapolis Brickyard National Forensic League National Tournament. His teams have won nine state tournaments in Indiana, and his students have competed in numerous final rounds—winning nine individual national championships. More important than tournament successes, he has enjoyed watching each student gain skills and confidence as well as meeting all of the coaches who give so generously to their own students.

COACH PROFILE Jeffrey Miller

- ▶ How did you become involved in speech and debate? I played baseball throughout my childhood and was destined to be a star (okay, probably not). But a broken arm in eighth grade required two surgeries, which sidelined me for a complete year. Since I couldn't play baseball in ninth grade, I ended up signing up for a debate class to fill my extra time. Plus, I thought it would be an easy "A." Eleven years later, I am a full-time debate coach.
- ▶ Why did you decide to become a speech and debate coach? Since childhood, I have wanted to teach. Throughout high school, my coach, Beverly Kelly, inspired me to not only teach, but also coach debate. My senior year of high school as President of the team, Ms. Kelly let me help teach new debaters and help plan tournament logistics. My role on the team helped reinforce my desire to coach debate.
- ▶ Tell us a little about your school and forensic program and the features that make them unique. I am the Director of Speech & Debate at Marist School, an independent Catholic school in Atlanta. In the past, the Marist program only featured Policy Debate. Last year, we added Public Forum and Extemporaneous Speaking. This year, we plan to additionally add a full slate of individual events.

- The support from our administration makes Marist very unique and offers me opportunities to really grow my program. My principal truly believes that speech and debate is absolutely vital to a student's well-rounded education.
- ▶ What challenges do you face as a coach? Recruiting new students to any activity at Marist is always our toughest challenge. We are fortunate to be successful at many sports and many academic competitions. Our students are often shared among several activities. It is very hard to attract "full-time debaters" when every program is highly successful.
- ► What is the most fulfilling part of your job? The most fulfilling part of my job is the opportunity to see high school students grow and mature throughout their debate careers. As debate coaches, we have some of the best opportunities to follow some of the brightest students in our state and regions as they grow. It is very special to see your students in the biggest rounds of their careers as seniors and to remember when they were just ninth graders struggling with simple tasks like flowing. There is nothing better than seeing alumni return to their schools to help younger students to ensure another generation of speech and debate students.

- ▶ In what ways has the National Forensic League helped you as a forensic coach? The National Forensic League has helped me build and shape the programs where I have coached.
 They have provided a framework for how I lead my team. By incorporating elements of the National Forensic League's Honor Code and other leadership programs, my team has been able to achieve the best possible results.
- How has coaching changed you? Besides gaining weight, coaching debate has helped me become a better person and a better teacher. Coaching debate has led me to meet many other great coaches around the nation. Only in our coaching community can our opponents also become some of our closest friends. Coaching has also improved my teaching because instead of becoming stale in my lesson plans, with every new topic, I indulge myself in new literature that expands my point of view and correspondingly that of my students.
- ► How do your students benefit from membership in the League? My students benefit from the National Forensic League in three unique ways: academic awards, participation at the District Tournament, and participation at the National Tournament. First.

my students benefit through League sponsored programs such as Academic All Americans and the merit point system. My incoming ninth graders can't wait to reach to 1,500 points; my juniors are retaking the SAT/ACT to reach the Academic All American status. The League has created a process where my students set goals and then work to achieve and surpass these goals. Second, we are fortunate to be in the great Georgia Southern Peach District. My students form very close friendships with other schools in our area and can continue to work with each other at national tournaments. Our District Tournament, although competitive, always seems to remind our students that they are our focus. We always send competitive students to nationals, and our district works together to send the most possible students each year to the National Tournament. Third, the National Tournament is what my students enjoy most about the season. They love sitting in the awards ceremony on Thursday night and Friday morning where they watch the best Duos and Interps in the country perform. Although we do not currently have many Interp students, my Policy debaters and Public Forum debaters love to watch other students their age perform their pieces.

► How does participation in forensics change your students' performance in the classroom? We always hear that "debaters are the smartest students in our schools." Forensics challenges already intelligent students to hone research capabilities, enhance speaking skills, and encourage them to be conscientious in the classroom. Our students do research as if they are writing a thesis for graduate school each and every month in Public Forum. They learn these skills and can quickly apply them in their English and history courses when writing a paper. The typical high school student dreads presentations or speaking in front of their peers... my debaters beg for it. Debate helps build confidence. Most debaters use this confidence and find themselves in leadership positions all throughout the school. Finally, debaters miss a ton of school. In order to be successful, my debaters have to manage how to handle make up work—whether that is turning in assignments early or taking the test when they return from a trip. Debaters are better than most students when it comes to missing school work.

- What do you want your students to take away from their experience on your team? I hope my students leave high school motivated to continue the skills they learn in debate in college. I hope that the students in my program leave Marist determined to become successful. I hope I have created a sense of community in my students and that when they graduate, they will return one day to to their high school debate community and pay it forward.
- ▶ Why is forensics important? There is nothing else that prepares our students for the real world the way forensics does. Whether it is better research skills, improved speaking skills, learning organizational methods, or the ability to multitask, forensics offers unique skills that each student will use once they graduate high school. It is the most beneficial extracurricular activity a high school student could join. 🔨

Jeffrey Miller is Director of Speech & Debate at Marist School in Atlanta, where he teaches Public Speaking and Advanced Logic & Debate. Jeffrey serves as the President of the Georgia Forensic Coaches Association and serves on the Georgia Southern Peach District Committee.

2011-12 CHARTER CHAPTER REPORT

This report summarizes the number of new members and degrees added by each charter chapter during the school year 2011-12. It does not reflect the current strength of each chapter. The "total" column indicates accumulated members and degrees since the chapter founding or the Leading Chapter Award.

The column marked '12 designates the chapter rank as of August 31, 2012. The column '11 designates the chapter rank the previous year.

Each year the top chapter in accumulated members and degrees, not more than one in a district, receives the Leading Chapter Award; then its accumulated total returns to zero and it begins a new record. The symbol ('07) indicates the last time a chapter won the Leading Chapter Award.

A school may not receive the Leading Chapter Award unless it has been a member for five years or five years have passed since last receiving the award. If a school loses its charter status, becomes suspended or expelled, or fails to add new members and degrees during the school year, it is ineligible to receive the Leading Chapter Award. A tie in the accumulated total for the Leading Chapter Award is broken in favor of the school which enrolled the greater number of new members and degrees during that school year. This report does not contain the records of provisional or member schools.

The Other Side of the Coin (Flip): Balanced Duties for PF Teams

by Aarxon Schurevich

he coin flip in Public Forum (PF) often becomes a competition between teams vying to be second speaker. The common belief holds that the second team—the last to speak—has all of the power in the round and can have the added benefit of hindsight regarding what the opponent has discussed in the first Final Focus when selecting issues to extend into their own Final Focus. The wisdom holds that the second team is able to have the final word that a judge considers, the ability to frame the lasting impression of the debate.

This common belief is only about half true. Sure, hindsight is quite an ally, but the benefit that being the first team holds is clear: in no other debate event does a rebuttal speaker have the luxury of a 1:1 ratio of time that grants equal speech time between an initial case and the rebuttal that attacks it.

Too often, teams that "lose" the coin flip and end up in the first team slot willfully surrender their amazing time allocation advantage by returning to their own case and reiterating positions that have yet to be attacked, positions that should have been clear the first time they were offered less than ten minutes prior.

In the name of addressing "both sides of the flow," first team debaters don't make use of the significant advantage provided by a four minute rebuttal to an initial four minute speech.

My feelings on the balancing of duties within any debate round are clear: if there is an imbalance in one direction, there must be something to counterbalance it. In Lincoln-Douglas (LD), for example, the affirmative debater speaks first and last and has the advantage of setting the direction of the debate, but the negative debater is given the benefit of the longer rebuttal (six minutes to the affirmative's four). Whether the speaking order arrangement does enough to overcome the negative's advantage in time is an issue for another day, but what's clear is that the speakers' duties are set as they are in an attempt to balance out the potential advantages for one debater over another.

In PF, the same should be true. While the second team has the advantage of hindsight in determining the direction of the last Final Focus, the first team has the counter-advantage of a 1:1 ratio as explained before. In effect, the first team has the ability to dig a hole so deep that the second team has trouble climbing out to put their hindsight advantage to good use.

There is, of course, another part of this equation. Without judges and coaches holding debaters on the second team to the duty of answering every argument made in the round up to the point of the second rebuttal—both the opposing case and opposing rebuttal then the first team has no unique benefit in their 1:1 speaking ratio as the second team is, in effect, given the same gift. Our students and those we evaluate should be held to the expectation that the second team will use their rebuttal to address all opposing arguments in the debate up to the rebuttals lest the means of winning within the event be significantly based upon which team is fortunate enough to win the coin flip and eagerly declare they are second.

Our competitive debate events have functioned on this level for as long as I've known anything about debate and as I understand, many, many years prior to that time. The expectation is that a debater will discuss and address all issues in a round up to the point of the rebuttals within those speeches, and anything that is not addressed is at its most essential level a conceded argument. In order to balance out the second team's lastword-in-the-debate advantage, judges must hold these debaters to the duty of addressing all opposing arguments in the debate up to the rebuttal.

If we as coaches and judges do not teach our own PF debaters to approach the event in such a fashion, we run the rather unavoidable circumstance of turning PF into an event wherein two proverbial ships pass one another in the night as argumentative clash is essentially eliminated.

There may be opponents to this concept of ideal PF competition due to a perception that this requirement could push PF to become a speed and spread driven activity, that the push for making debaters accountable for every argument made will take PF down the same road that Policy and LD have been taking for years. I feel that the underlying premise of this argument is faulty insofar as PF will still remain an event geared toward the citizen judge.

Because parents, non-debate affiliated teachers, school administrators, bus drivers, and other members of our communities make up a significant portion of our PF judge pools, the kind of rapidity that many believe has harmfully stricken LD and Policy is in the vast majority of cases rendered pointless by judges who find it nothing more than silly. There may, of course, be occasional rounds wherein teams, knowing a certain judge's preferences ahead of time, feel comfortable speaking at lightning speed, but rounds of that nature will certainly be the minority of cases if judges and coaches take the active role that citizen judges certainly will against presentations that do not respect the public friendly, communicative nature of PF.

Of course, this redirection of teams' approaches to the duties of the rebuttal speakers comes as well with new obligations for coaches who would be tasked with teaching students how to cover eight minutes of material in four minutes. To these coaches, I say focus on teaching your students how to make two great arguments instead of one good one and 67 mediocre ones. That's hyperbole, of course, but it feels like every time I judge a tournament, a decent number of second team rebuttal answers begin with some variation of the phrase, "I have six responses." When I hear those words escape the lips of the second team's rebuttal speaker, I know that most of those answers won't be worth the time that slips away while they're barely explained.

When the coin is in the air, our teams should not loathe any position in the debate. Our teams should be focused instead on what they know they need to do to take advantage of the benefits of either order. By holding second teams to the same duty of argumentative coverage that the second debater/team would face in any other event, PF becomes more fair and more fun for all involved and keeps its own identity in the process.

The place where NATIONAL CHAMPIONS choose to continue their education

WKU HONORS college

The Honors College at WKU engages gifted and high-achieving students in the academic experience of a highly selective private institution with the educational and research opportunities available at a major public university. Honors College scholars successfully compete with students from across the globe for placement into world-renowned research programs, top graduate and professional schools, or prestigious national and international scholarships.

- Recognized as one of the nation's top producers of J. William Fulbright grants
- Recognized for excellence in science, mathematics and engineering by the prestigious Barry Goldwater Scholarship program

 More than $2 million in renewable scholarships awarded annually to the Honors freshman class Apply to the Honors College at www.wku.edu/honors and visit the Honors College after your audition for the WKU Forensics Team.

WKU Scholarships

The Cherry Presidential and 1906 Founders Scholarship

- Requires a 31 ACT/1360 SAT and 3.8 unweighted GPA
- Valued between $11,00-$15,000 annually, covering full tuition, and allowances for housing and books Applicants not selected for the Cherry or Founders awards that have a 3.9 GPA will receive a 100 percent in-state tuition award; those with a 3.8-3.89 GPA will receive a 50 percent in-state tuition award.

Regents Scholarship

- Requires a 28 ACT/1240 SAT and a 3.90 unweighted GPA
- Valued at nearly $8,500 annually, covering full tuition

National/International Academic Scholarship (NIAS)

- Requires a 24 ACT/1090 SAT and 3.4 unweighted GPA
- Covers 75% of the difference between the non-resident tuition rate and the Kentucky resident tuition rate two tournaments in one day!

12.01.12 Junior Hilltopper offering competition in 11 jr. events!

12.07-8.12 Hilltopper Classic our largest tournament of the year!

For the competition year, please keep the above dates in mind.

HILLTOPPER CLASSIC

The 2011 Hilltopper Classic was a great experience which brought schools from all over the country. The 2012 Hilltopper Classic will be even better.

- Hilltopper Classic events Broadcast, Cong., Dec., Dl, Duo, Ext., Hl, Improv. Duo, Imp., OO, Poetry, Prose, Pub. Forum, & Storytelling. || Junior Hilltopper events Broadcast, Dec., Duo Act., Ext., Interp. of Lit., Improv. Duo, Poetry, Prose, Pub. Speaking, Solo Acting, & Storytelling.
- Semifinals where appropriate.
- O The Hilltopper Classic remains an NIETOC qualifier. Only a few tournaments across the country allow students to qualify for the NIETOC.
- We host both individual events and debate, over a two-day schedule!
- Last year, team member auditions were a great success.

 Several students were selected to become WKU competitors, and some received scholarships.
