A Resolution to Recognize Catalonia

Whereas, Catalonia has long considered itself a nation within a hostile state; and

Whereas, The history of its self-government has been repeatedly disrupted through acts of war and dictatorships imposed by Central Spain; and

Whereas, The United States has its roots based in independence; and

Whereas, The United States has enormous leverage in the situation between Spain and an emerging Catalonia; and

Whereas, The United States could use its influence to prevent a violent crackdown on the region and encourage a peaceful separation; now therefore be it

Resolved, That the Congress here assembled recognize Catalonia as independent from Spain.
